Profile

Tim was admitted as an advocate in July 2016 and is looking forward to building a broad practice representing clients in courts and tribunals across Scotland.

Tim is the only Chartered Engineer at the Scottish Bar. He is therefore uniquely placed to bring his technical and legal skills to bear on disputes or inquiries involving engineering, technology or project management issues.

Tim is also interested in public law and human rights, having previously been seconded to the Office of the Advocate General, where he dealt mainly with Immigration Judicial Reviews. His other legal experience includes general public and commercial litigation; procurement challenges; personal injury; health and safety; fatal accident inquiries; professional regulation; property; private client work; employment and criminal trials.

Before retraining for the legal profession, Tim served as a naval officer in a variety of operational, engineering, procurement and information technology roles at sea and ashore. He also brings to his practice his experience as a charity trustee, a former member of the Children's Panel and a campaigner for fairer access to the legal profession.
